

LEGROS BUCHANAN & PAUL

Neil Diemer

Neil Diemer joined LeGros Buchanan & Paul as an associate in October 2015. His prior practice includes personal injury litigation, and most recently working for a firm with a national trial practice, defending corporate clients in products liability, torts, and employment litigation.

A Seattle native, Neil obtained his undergraduate degree in Environmental Policy from Western Washington University in 2005. In 2011, he received his J.D. from the University of Washington School of Law. During law school, Neil interned with the Washington State Attorney General's Office and for a United States Senator in Washington, D.C. Neil was also awarded the Sampson Fellowship in Comparative Public Interest Law, allowing him to spend a summer working on human rights law in Belfast, Northern Ireland.
